Your car needs attention!

Give your car the attention it needs and care for the air at the same time! Regular oil changes and tune-ups keep your car in good condition, saving you money on gas and expensive break-downs. Poorly maintained vehicles also can release up to 10 times more emissions than well-maintained vehicles. So keeping your car in tip-top shape not only helps you, but the environment!

Check and Save!

Under inflated tires actually increase the drag and fuel consumption on your vehicle, costing you more in gas and actually adding to tailpipe emissions. So check your tires monthly and inflate when necessary.

Reduce idling emissions

Excessive amounts of idling actually wears on your vehicle and wastes gas, increasing emissions. Try turning off your vehicle when idling for more than 30 seconds. This can be while waiting for a train, waiting to pick up your child, or even sitting in construction traffic this summer.

Save yourself time and money!

Combine errands together into one efficient trip. This will save on gas and emissions from your vehicle.
